My Last Duchess
Robert Browning, 1842

FERRARA

That’s my last Duchess painted on the wall, Looking as if she were alive. I call That piece a wonder, now; Fra Pandolf’s hands Worked busily a day, and there she stands.
Will’t please you sit and look at her? I said “Fra Pandolf” by design, for never read Strangers like you that pictured countenance,
The depth and passion of its earnest glance, But to myself they turned (since none puts by The curtain I have drawn for you, but I)
And seemed as they would ask me, if they durst, How such a glance came there; so, not the first Are you to turn and ask thus. Sir, ’twas not Her husband’s presence only, called that spot Of joy into the Duchess’ cheek; perhaps Fra Pandolf chanced to say, “Her mantle laps Over my lady’s wrist too much,” or “Paint Must never hope to reproduce the faint Half-flush that dies along her throat.” Such stuff Was courtesy, she thought, and cause enough For calling up that spot of joy. She had A heart—how shall I say?—too soon made glad, Too easily impressed; she liked whate’er
She looked on, and her looks went everywhere.
Sir, ’twas all one! My favour at her breast,
The dropping of the daylight in the West,
The bough of cherries some officious fool Broke in the orchard for her, the white mule
She rode with round the terrace—all and each Would draw from her alike the approving speech, Or blush, at least. She thanked men—good! but thanked Somehow—I know not how—as if she ranked My gift of a nine-hundred-years-old name With anybody’s gift. Who’d stoop to blame This sort of trifling? Even had you skill In speech—which I have not—to make your will Quite clear to such an one, and say, “Just this Or that in you disgusts me; here you miss, Or there exceed the mark”—and if she let Herself be lessoned so, nor plainly set Her wits to yours, forsooth, and made excuse—E’en then would be some stooping; and I choose Never to stoop. Oh, sir, she smiled, no doubt, Whene’er I passed her; but who passed without Much the same smile? This grew; I gave commands; Then all smiles stopped together. There she stands As if alive. Will’t please you rise? We’ll meet The company below, then. I repeat,
The Count your master’s known munificence Is ample warrant that no just pretense
Of mine for dowry will be disallowed;
Though his fair daughter’s self, as I avowed At starting, is my object. Nay, we’ll go Together down, sir. Notice Neptune, though, Taming a sea-horse, thought a rarity,
Which Claus of Innsbruck cast in bronze for me!

The River-Merchant’s Wife: A Letter
Ezra Pound, 1915

After Li Po

While my hair was still cut straight across my forehead
I played about the front gate, pulling flowers.
You came by on bamboo stilts, playing horse,
You walked about my seat, playing with blue plums.
And we went on living in the village of Chôkan:
Two small people, without dislike or suspicion.
At fourteen I married My Lord you.
I never laughed, being bashful.
Lowering my head, I looked at the wall.
Called to, a thousand times, I never looked back.

At fifteen I stopped scowling,
I desired my dust to be mingled with yours Forever and forever, and forever.
Why should I climb the look out?

At sixteen you departed
You went into far Ku-tô-en, by the river of swirling eddies,
And you have been gone five months.
The monkeys make sorrowful noise overhead.

You dragged your feet when you went out.
By the gate now, the moss is grown, the different mosses, Too deep to clear them away!
The leaves fall early this autumn, in wind.
The paired butterflies are already yellow with August Over the grass in the West garden;
They hurt me.
I grow older.
If you are coming down through the narrows of the river Kiang, Please let me know beforehand,
And I will come out to meet you
As far as Chō-fū-Sa.

Riot Act, April 29, 1992
Ai, 1993

I’m going out and get something.
I don’t know what.
I don’t care.
Whatever’s out there, I’m going to get it.
Look in those shop windows at boxes and boxes of Reeboks and Nikes to make me fly through the air like Michael Jordan like Magic.
While I’m up there, I see Spike Lee.
Looks like he’s flying too straight through the glass that separates me from the virtual reality
I watch everyday on TV.
I know the difference between what it is and what it isn’t.
Just because I can’t touch it doesn’t mean it isn’t real.
All I have to do is smash the screen, reach in and take what I want.
Break out of prison.
South Central homey’s newly risen from the night of living dead, but this time he lives, he gets to give the zombies a taste of their own medicine.
Open wide and let me in, or else I’ll set your world on fire, but you pretend that you don’t hear.
You haven’t heard the word is coming down like the hammer of the gun of this black son, locked out of this big house, while massa looks out the window and sees only smoke.
Massa doesn’t see anything else, not because he can’t,
but because he won’t.
He’d rather hear me talking about mo’ money, mo’ honeys and gold chains and see me carrying my favorite things from looted stores than admit that underneath my Raider’s cap, the aftermath is staring back unblinking through the camera’s lens, courtesy of CNN, my arms loaded with boxes of shoes that I will sell at the swap meet to make a few cents on the declining dollar.
And if I destroy myself and my neighborhood ain’t nobody’s business, if I do, but the police are knocking hard at my door and before I can open it, they break it down and drag me in the yard.
They take me in to be processed and charged, to await trial,
while Americans forget the day the wealth finally trickled down to the rest of us.
